

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary, not even in conjunction with an anti-Bush documentary nor a pro-Kerry piece, shortly before the 2005 Presidential election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. When large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the company's bottom line and political bedfellows, and less of what we need to make balanced, informed decisions in our "free and the envy of the world" democracy.

Please, pay attention to what is happening here, and help to preserve honor, fairness, and the law of the land to our Federal regulating institutions. Thank you for listening.
